Issue #8: Venom Month

As some of you may know, I am obsessed with Venom. In October, I consider the entire month to be “Venom Month” and celebrate the character as a replacement for Halloween, which I do not observe for religious purposes. October 25th is my personal “Venom Day” where I eat a ton of sweets and consume Venom-related media. I chose this day because that’s when “Venom: The Last Dance” was released in 2024, which is the first year where I started this tradition.

Last year, I celebrated Venom Month by baking all kinds of crazy desserts. Here are some of them that I consider to be my best work. Warning: A lot of chocolate!

Venom Cake contains three types of chocolate and is very moist.
I make some version of this cake every year!

Symbiote Shake contains chocolate, silver sprinkles, cookies and cream, and vanilla. This pairs very well with the Venom Cake.

Carnage Cookies which are red velvet with chocolate chips and drizzle. Credit to my sister (Moonshot) for the artwork topper.

Knull’s Throne Brownies made with triple fudge batter and extra chocolate. The Necrosword and Knull emblem were both fun to make.

Last year's Venom Month was a lot of fun. I also end up buying a lot of Venom-related merchandise, such as figures, stickers, and clothing. There are a lot of video game transactions I have completed thanks to Venom, such as in Fortnite, Rocket League, and Marvel SNAP.

Admittedly, this year's Venom Month has not been as exciting as the past two years, which is mostly due to living in a new location where the weather still feels like summer even in October. On top of that, I have less time to spend on baking and not as many resources as before.

However, I was still able to make this Venom Month meaningful by diving into the old comics, starting from The Amazing Spider-Man and working my way through to the 2003 series. Out of the many panels that I saved, here are some of my favorites.

I think I might need just as much phenethylamine as Venom. I love chocolate!

“Mollycoddling” is an interesting word, isn’t it?

When Venom was on trial, he suddenly became a federal agent. An unexpected turn of events, but surely a welcome one! Spoiler alert: This does not turn out well for him.

Venom breaking the fourth wall while throwing hands inside of a church.

A hilarious remark when Venom is forced to swim against a strong current.

"Rhetoric spouting bimbos with blades!" I mean, come on, that's poetic and funny.

Me too, Venom, me too.
(This is moments after a friend of his cuts him off because he accidentally threw her fiance down a building because he mistakenly thought he was a drug dealer.)

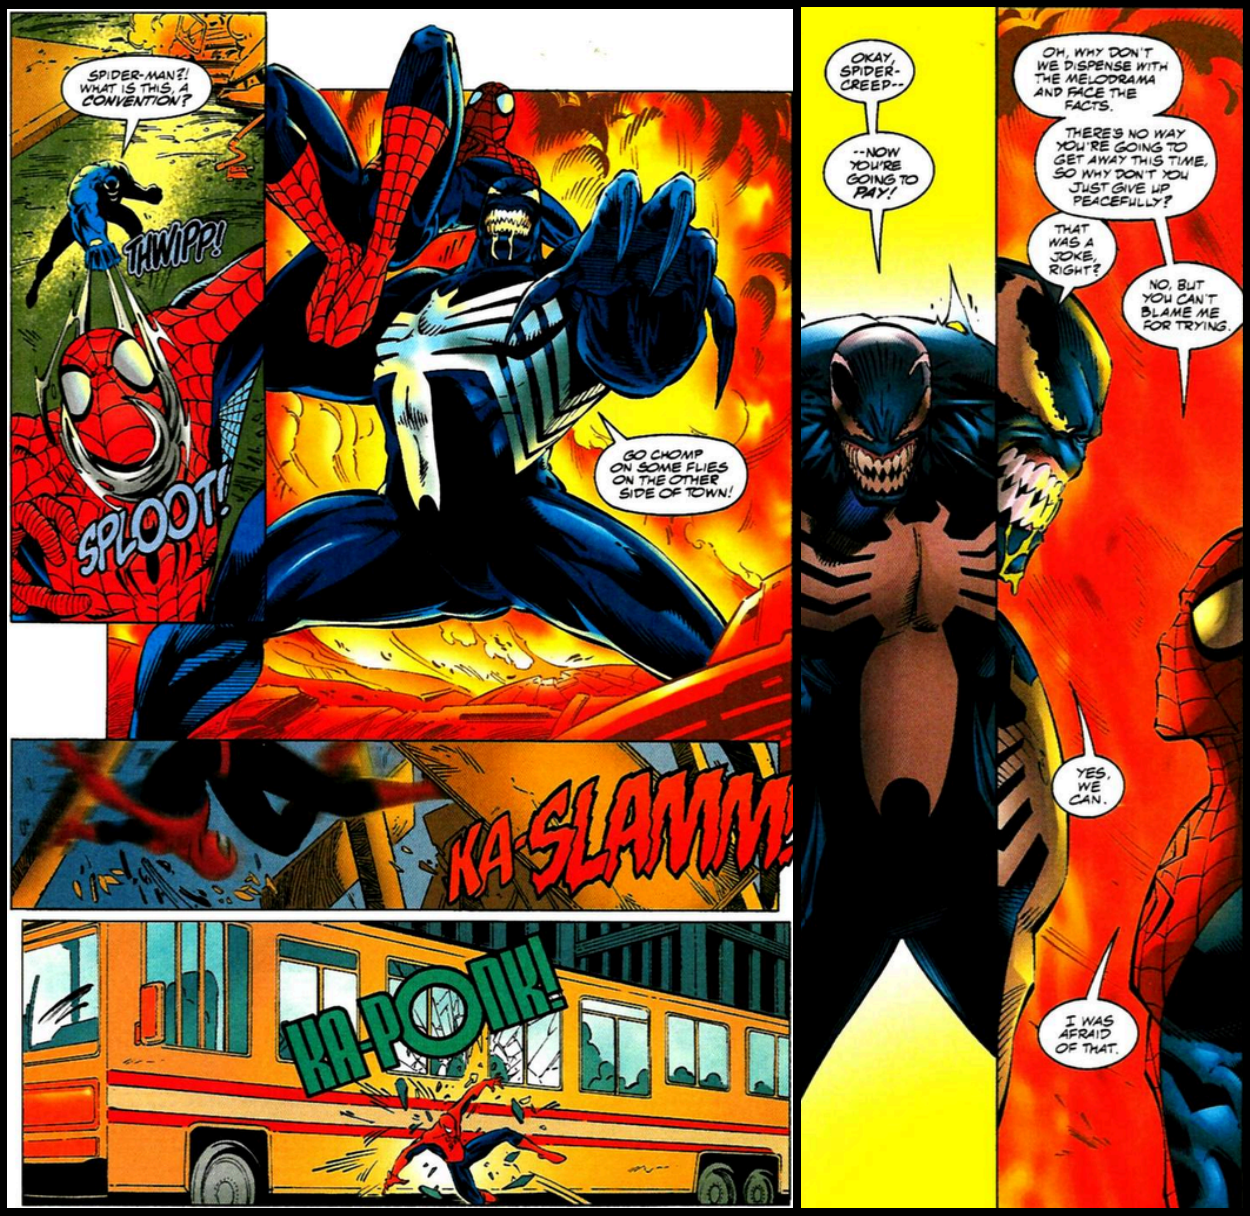

Panel from the Venom manga! Since I am actively studying Japanese and love manga, this was an absolute dream come true for me. (“We are”---“Venom”)

It's always on-sight with Spider-Man. This happened right after Venom fought a self-righteous lunatic in a costume. Also, their little exchange on the right is very funny.

Venom Month might sound silly to you, but for me it's a time where I can be myself. I can forget about the difficulties of life for a bit and just enjoy the character that is so beloved to me. I think having such a special event that I personally celebrate helps me stay true to myself and is also great for my mental health.

Also during this month, I listen to my special Venom playlist, which contains songs from the movie but also songs that reference Venom or remind me of the character. I have made the playlist public here. For this year, I spent the past week preparing a collection of Venom artwork. It will be posted on the website immediately after releasing this issue of the Icebox. Please take a look!

I could go on about what I like about Venom, but to put it as simply as possible: He is a badass anti-hero, iconic villain to Spider-Man, loves chocolate like I do, has an unexpectedly good grasp of neuroscience, and always does as he pleases without harming anyone that is innocent. That's just my type of character. Even the first reason, which is that he is really cool, is enough for me.

If you want to read more Icebox issues about Venom, I published #4: Brand New Venom on The Wrench Studios website back in August. I have also written about Venom previously in the old Icebox, which you can find here.

Finally, I just want to thank my friends and family who put up with me all the time. All of them know very well how much I love Venom. I think it's simply part of what makes Master Freeze as cool as he is.

Thank you for reading this issue of the Icebox. "We are Venom."
